

Seasons: an acrostic poem

S

Seal snorts, "What are you?"

"I am season, I'm what changes nights and day, also weathers in some different ways", smiles Season in reply.

E

Eagle encounters, "What are you?"

"I am Season. I am what brings Christmas, and I'm the one who brings Easter. I am the one who tells bears it is time to sleep," said Season in reply.

A

Ant asks, "What are you?"

"I am Season. I bring weather, I bring storms, but if you ask, I would say checkout climate change for a way," answers Season in reply.

Snake scoffs, "What are you?"

"I am season. Temperatures you ask are exactly what I am. You must know me and see differences from December to April," scowls Season in reply.

O

Orangutan observes, "What are you?"

"I am Season. Don't be alarmed – I don't want to cause any harm. I just do my job, you see," mumbles Season in reply.

N

Narwal notices, "what are you?"

"I am Season – remember me? You saw me at spring, saw me in summer, in autumn. You saw me everywhere. And you always will."

S

Snail smiles, "what are you?"

"I am Season, I'm everywhere. I am the cold, the hot, the ice, the snow – and you should know," riddles Season.

"The whole world will know me as their leader and their hope," bows Season in reply.
